Illness:

If a medical problem is discovered, an agent of Pets R Family Veterinary Hospital will telephone the owner or emergency contact to discuss the problem and determine the course of action to be taken. If the owner or emergency contact cannot be reached the attending veterinarian has my permission to take the necessary steps to diagnose and treat, in accordance with current medical standards. In case of emergency, measures to preserve and stabilize vital function shall be taken immediately.

A note about “Kennel Cough”: Kennel cough is an umbrella term that encompasses several upper respiratory viruses and bacteria that can be transmitted from dog to dog. We require a Bordetella vaccine, which protects against one cause of upper respiratory infection, but there is no protection from the other viruses and bacteria that can cause coughing, sneezing, and congestion. In any situation where there are many dogs housed together in close proximity, an upper respiratory can be easily passed. A dog does not have to be showing symptoms to pass it along. We make every effort to isolate any dogs showing symptoms, but if a dog is here asymptomatic, and infects other dogs, there is no way for us to prevent that. It is an inherent risk that you take when you board/daycare/groom your dog at a facility where there are other dogs – similar to taking your child to a daycare facility. If your dog was staying with us and may have picked up an upper respiratory, we will examine your pet at no charge as a courtesy, and only require that owners pay for the medication.
